

Princeton, January 3rd 2024.

Dear Reader,

Thanks so much for clicking on the link that was supposed to deliver a copy of my job market paper to you.

I am substantially revising the paper. It needs some more attention to detail, and I am improving a number of things:

- Stronger focus on how the model delivers a realistic theory of within and cross-country growth patterns that explicitly deals with the role of scale effects
- Allow for endogenous human capital accumulation in emerging markets, which leads to different (and more benevolent) long-run implications
- Generalize the production function to allow for a tighter link between theory and data and to structurally estimate key parameters

In summary, the next version is going to be a lot better than the current one. Since you probably only have time to read the paper once, wait up for the revised version. I'd say two months from now. If you can't wait, click here.

Thanks for checking out the paper!

All the best,
Florian Trouvain